To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter to inform you of the pleasure it was to have Brady Rogers as a student of mine at Dakota County Technical College (DCTC).

Brady was the type of student that doesn't just didn't do coursework just to do it. He did it and then would ask questions afterward if it didn't make sense. If something wasn't working, he would take the time to figure out why it was not working, which is one of the skills that not all our networking students possess (and I feel is a very strong skill our students should have). While at DCTC, he was tasked with many hands-on labs including Active Directory, Hyper-V, working with Cisco gear (CCNA level), and working with firewalls including Fortinet.

Someone will be lucky enough to hire him in their IT department. He seems to have a natural knack for the computer field.

In conclusion, I'm writing this letter to any prospective employers to let them know that Brady is a great person with a desire to learn and work hard. It is without a doubt that he could handle any task that he is put up to. Feel free to contact me should you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Nathan J. Blommel
